Has Just Returned from New York, His Second Trip This Season.

300---THREE HUNDRED CASES OF NEW GOODS---300

Have Just been Opened and Marked Fifty, Sixty and Seventy-Five Cents on the Dollar.

SOME OF THE GRANDEST BARGAINS ON EARTH.

Wonderful Drives in Dress - Goods!

280 pieces fine 38-inch all wool Tricots in a variety of shades and mixtures, goods actually worth 60c, at 25c.

30,000 yards—A grand big lot. I took every yard the importer had of Striped Australian Saiting; goods truly worth 25c yard, on sale all the week at 10c yard.

29 pieces—Only a small lot of all wool 54-inch Cloth Plaids; goods retailing the world over at 75c, on Monday at 60c.

168 pieces Superb Imported Surah Serges, extra wide; immense line of all new shades. This cloth cannot be matched in the United States at 50c yard.

Only 47 pieces, and small ones at that, of 46-inch Broad Cloths; only 9 shades, but all good ones, sold to delight our customers and to dismay competitors on Monday and Tuesday at the ridiculous price of 50c yard.

Owing to the lateness of the season I fortunately secured from an importer two cases of very fine Broad Cloths, which had been held in the customhouse on account of undervaluation. I bought them for a trifle over the duty and will offer you all colors of Ready Shrunken Broad Cloths, that are worth $1.50 anywhere in America, at $1.00 yard.

New French Plaids, new Cloth Plaids, Novelty Stripes, new Side Band effects.

50 fine French Novelty Suits, finest imported, at nearly half the price asked a month ago.

No mere handful of goods to make your selection from. Each department offers you the choicest things to tempt your fancy and please your purse. Every stock fully reinforced with attractive Merchandise and Startling Prices.

Will place on sale early Monday morning 1200 yards 38-inch Dundee Mixtures; some houses are advertising them boldly at 50c yd. To avoid speculation only one dress pattern sold to any one. High's price 10c yard.

400 pieces Checked all wool Suitings, all wool and fine extra wide; goods never before shown under 60c, at 25c yard.

Black and Mourning GOODS.

At 15c Yard Double Width Black Cashmere.
At 20c Yard Double Width all wool Serge.
At 25c Yard 36-inch English Henrietta.
At 37 1/2c Yard 40-inch all Wool Cashmere.
At 42 1/2c Yard 46-inch Extra Heavy Tynol Serge.
At 30c Yard 38-inch all wool Tricot.
At 40c Yard 40-inch Foulle Cloth.
At 65c Yard 48-inch Henrietta, worth 85c
At 75c Yard 8 1/2 inch Finished Henrietta, worth $1.
At 90c Yard 8 1/2 inch Finished Henrietta, worth $1.25.
At 90c Yard 50-inch French Tricot, never sold under $1.25.

J. M. High is headquarters for B. Priestly & Co's Celebrated Fabrics. Special for this week—At 98c the regular $1.25 Silk Warp Henrietta.

WHAT TO EAT

THE QUESTION THAT BOTHERS THE HOUSEWIFE.

Full Fruits and Vegetables in Abundance—Cooking Butter, Table Butter—Some New Bills-of-Fare.

"What shall we eat, what shall we drink and what shall we eat?" is an old question that is still new.

The men generally settle the question of "what to eat" as many times a day as they feel like it, and the women wrestle with "what to eat" as often as their purses will permit a renewal of the agony, but "what to eat" comes up with clock-like regularity, three times a day, purse or no purse.

One thousand and ninety-five times a year the housewife has to confront the problem of giving one man his meat and another his poison; and she has to find some thing something to suit the taste of a household where, Jack-and-Gill like, one can eat no fat and another can eat no lean; she must tempt the appetite of the invalid, and satisfy the craving of the omnivorous youngster.

Between seasons the problem is the hardest to solve.

Just now the fall vegetables are in the market, game and fish are beginning to come in, and the turkey crop is ripe.

"What do the people eat?" said a northside grocer; "they eat everything they can lay their hands on—dressed turkeys at 15 cents a pound, dressed chickens at 12 cents, squab at 12 cents, celery at 80 cents a dozen, cauliflower at 10 cents a head, radishes, snap beans, Irish potatoes, egg plant, sweet potatoes, carrots, green corn, parsnips, tomatoes, cabbage, Spanish onions, dried fruits, cranberries, pine apples, grapes—Delaware, Catawba and Georgia.

"Cabbages this year are the finest I ever saw. There is one that weighs 40 pounds and another one that weighs 40. They came from Virginia and I am selling them at three cents a pound. I sold a cabbage awhile ago for thirty cents."

The game season is now open and wild squirrels have been brought in, and sold for 12 cents a pound. "Possums are ripe and they sell on the streets for seven or eight cents. There will be no partridge shooting in Fulton county this year till the first of November. A few birds have been brought in from other counties."

On Whitehall street these two signs are displayed in queer contrast:

COOKING BUTTER.

CHOICE TABLE BUTTER.

What is the difference between table butter and cooking butter?

The man at the shop answered the question by saying, "The only difference I know of is that cooking butter is not so fresh as table butter."

A lady who prides herself on using only the best materials in her housekeeping, explained that cooking butter is white butter, such as the average country article, which sells for 22 cents a pound, and table butter is that golden Jersey-made compound which brings 35 to 40 cents in Atlanta and often fetches a dollar a pound in New York City.

This is a distinction with a decided difference, but there are cases which will fit both definitions.

"As table" said a dealer, "we are getting everything now but butter. They will not come in until the 15th of December. Red snappers from Pensacola are for ten cents a pound, Tampa mullet sell for eight cents, pompanos bringing twenty-five to thirty cents. All the rest sell at 10 cents a pound. We get salt water trout from Florida, herring and salmon from Cincinnati, porgies from Charleston, fresh water bream, channel cat and black bass from Florida."

"Where do your oysters come from?"

"I sell Savannah oysters for 35 cents a quart, Biloxi oysters for 40 cents and Norfolk oysters for 45 cents. Later in the season the Savannah oysters will be sold for 25 cents a quart, Biloxi shrimps sell for 25 cents a quart."

The Delvidere oysters sold in Atlanta last winter for 25 cents a quart. Georgia plants, or regularly cultivated oysters, raised on the coast of this state. They were much sought after, and were pronounced equal to the best.

One care of the housewife is to present a bill of fare which will not evolve into something like this:

Indigestion.

Headache.

Irritability.

Gout.

Cholera Morbus.

Nightmare.

Without Relief.

There are some people who are sure to partake of this bill of fare, eating certain things. Some bad results of particular diet are known quantities. Now, the question is, can't the good results of other articles of diet be equally known? Can't the good results of a bill of fare translated into something like this:

Good Digestion.

Good Humour.

Anecdote—Vivacity Sauce.

Wine of Wit.

Sound Sleep.

Animal Spirits.

Good Work.

It is said that good dinners have accomplished a great deal in diplomacy and business, and there is no doubt that they have, but bad dinners have produced as much by the irritability that followed them.

Perhaps the time will come when the finesse of the housewife will discern the nature of the business to come and decide to let the good man of the house for it without letting him know why she treats him with such a peculiar bill of fare.

The effect of champagne and other sparkling beverages is not so much in the stomach as in the head, but there are articles of plain fare which give in a short time, a healthy stimulus that will cheer but not irritate.

Then there is the time of year. But the seasons have kindly provided for that. There are the fruits for summer, and for winter the pumpkin and one kind of good cheer, the possum, the sweet potato and the turkey coming in abundance.

"The best way to cook oysters," said a man of cosmopolitan taste, "is to steam them. That is the favorite style of cooking them in Baltimore. The oysters in the shell are put into a metal bucket and the steam is introduced. The shells swell and crack open and the oysters are eaten on the half shell. They retain all their flavor and they are delicious by the way, I see that they are cooked that way in Atlanta now. It is strange that it takes so long to introduce a style of cooking that is so much like other places."

"Oysters on the Half Shell." "Quail on Toast" and "Rice Birds on Toast," are familiar signs on the streets. The crop of rice birds, like that of all kinds of game this year, is good.

In front of the grocery stores now there are barrels of dried raspberries and dried blackberries. Blackberry pie on Thanksgiving day and at Christmas is a novelty which will doubtless be popular.

Now that cold storage is here, it is possible to have perfectly fresh watermelons all winter and to eat blackberry pie and pumpkins, just as we have been eating them in July.

The orange is hanging out its yellow flag at the fruit stalls, but no one seems to be afraid of catching yellow fever there. On the contrary, the regular use of oranges and lemons is said to fortify the system against yellow fever by counteracting the predisposition of many persons to biliousness.

Those who have been too strong for the yellow fever microbes in a close contest, and are weeping for greater victory now, may increase their alimentary strength with the doughty chestnut. The chances are that the fortunes of war will be against them.

But the best of the season is yet to come. Now, that the grasshopper has left the vine whereon he crept and the sweet pot

DOG AND GUN.

THE BEST HUNTING SEASON IN FIVE YEARS.

Birds Plentiful This Year—Tales of Atlanta Nimrod—His Best Shot.

And now for dog and gun!

The hunting season will be at its best by November, and bird-hunters are already out in other counties. They are restrained by law in Fulton until the first of November.

Game is unusually plentiful this year.

"From what I can learn," said Mr. Willis Venable, "there are more birds this fall than there have been in five years. We had a dry May and a dry June and that always makes the bird crop large. But, besides that, I hear from all sections that there are plenty of birds. Hunting will be good on any of the railroads. There will be a good crop of birds."

Atlanta has some mighty hunters.

"The best day I ever did," said Mr. Willis Venable, "was about ten years ago, before there were so many hunters. It was in a field where the birds were so very gentle and it was smooth shooting, with no woods in the way. I killed 82 birds between sunup and sundown, and I think I shot about a hundred birds. There was no one with me who had a gun, and the only man in the field besides myself was the owner of the plantation who went with me and carried the birds."

"The best shot I ever made," said Mr. F. E. Bloch, "was in a field where the birds were so very gentle and it was smooth shooting, with no woods in the way. DOG AND GUN.

THE BEST HUNTING SEASON IN FIVE YEARS.

Birds Plentiful This Year—Tales of Atlanta Nimrod—His Best Shot.

And now for dog and gun!

The hunting season will be at its best by November, and bird-hunters are already out in other counties. They are restrained by law in Fulton until the first of November.

Game is unusually plentiful this year.

"From what I can learn," said Mr. Willis Venable, "there are more birds this fall than there have been in five years. We had a dry May and a dry June and that always makes the bird crop large. But, besides that, I hear from all sections that there are plenty of birds. Hunting will be good on any of the railroads. There will be a good crop of birds."

Atlanta has some mighty hunters.

"The best day I ever did," said Mr. Willis Venable, "was about ten years ago, before there were so many hunters. It was in a field where the birds were so very gentle and it was smooth shooting, with no woods in the way. I killed 82 birds between sunup and sundown, and I think I shot about a hundred birds. There was no one with me who had a gun, and the only man in the field besides myself was the owner of the plantation who went with me and carried the birds."

PUTNAM'S FAIR.

HOW THE GRAND OLD COUNTY TURNED OUT.

And Had an Exhibition Surpassed by None—The Great Display of Horses—Views of a Visitor and What He Saw.

DEAR MR. EDITOR: I see you have made some very complimentary allusions to the Putnam county fair recently held in Eatonton. Your remarks are very nearly put, but the trouble is, you don't go far enough. I have heard it said, or I have read it somewhere, that an editor is compelled to be discreet and conservative; but there are occasions when, with entire safety to the country, he may be permitted to let out a few facts in his flowing style, and distribute his information at a gallop, as it were.

You are entirely right when you say that the Putnam county fair was a success. It was a surprise even to those who gave it form and shape and color. I am told that the exhibition, as it stood, represented only a part of the county—there being some very energetic and enterprising gentlemen in some of the districts who objected to it on various grounds, or gave it the cold shoulder for various reasons that I do not intend to repeat to myself. But if the fair could be a success—a success as a show, a pecuniary success—without the aid of some of the most enterprising spirits in the county, what will it be when the whole community of Putnam county is in exhibit for the honor and welfare of the county?

There is but one answer to such a question. The fair in which the whole county cordially unites will be the most characteristic exhibit ever seen in the south. I do not mean the fair for Putnam is nothing but an individual. The county is old enough to be homogeneous. It has been permeated and clarified, so to speak, by those old family strains that are the richest heritage of a perfect civilization. It has contributed to society some of the finest women ever seen in this land, and to the state some very able men in all the walks of life. The result of all this is a feeling of county pride that cannot be described. It is a feeling intense enough to regulate men's lives. I know it has been so in my own county. I have never attempted or accomplished anything that I did not ask myself, "What will the people of Putnam think of this?" It is a very curious feeling, indeed, and has probably never been experienced by those bred in communities less compact and homogeneous.

But you will say, dear Mr. Editor, that all this sort of talk is not to the point; that your space is limited, and that what your readers want to hear is something about the fair. Well, the fair was a success in all its departments. The display of agricultural products was particularly good, and it was supplemented by an independent display from "Opposition" district, in which six farmers and their wives joined. This exhibit included every product of the farm and garden, and a wonderful collection of poultry, including chickens, turkeys, geese, ducks, and swans. In every other district in the county, I had joined "Opposition," the fair would have been one of the largest ever held in middle Georgia. There was no room in the main building for the "Opposition" exhibit, so the exhibitors had to erect a temple of their own out of their products and placed it on the outside.

The displays in the art and household departments were especially fine. Some of the paintings were beautiful, indeed, and the fancy needlework was of the most exquisite. Some of the young ladies entered into a contest for the best home-made calico dress, and the result of their handiwork was a collection of gowns of surpassing beauty. There is not room here to make a catalogue of the exhibits or to give the names of those to whom premiums were awarded.

One of the most interesting features of the fair was the exhibits of Putnam county horses. This exhibit was one of the best that has ever been seen in the state, and shows that Bermuda grass doesn't take the old red hills without paying a rich rental. Most of the horses and colts are thoroughbreds, and there were a number of trotters so fast that their owners would not permit the watch to be held over them. Some of the colts that trotted at Eatonton have a great career before them if their owners choose to train them for the track.

One of the features of the fair, and a most interesting one, was the pacing of Dr. Nieber's black horse against time with a running mate. The black pacer is a wonder. Without training, he went around the track at the rate of 2:20, and was under no great pressure at that. The success of the fair in all its parts is due to the efforts of Major C. D. Leonard and Mr. B. W. Hunt in town, and Mr. John T. Dennis in the country, and these had behind them the most of the enterprise that drives to the county name. There were the two papers, the Messenger and the Enterprise, and there was that indefinable feeling of county pride to which I have already alluded. All the county did not contribute to the exhibit, for there was not room enough in the building for that, and yet most of the county turned out to visit the fair, and this, as you know, is a very substantial way of showing appreciation.

But for me, dear Mr. Editor, the fair had other and larger attractions. You have read what Shakespeare says of his affable ghosts? Well, they were there for me and my great numbers. In the features of a little girl, running across the grounds, I could see the faces of schoolmates long since dead. A little girl saluted me in the street and I seemed to see his grandfather waving his hand. I saw it is, and so we go. The past is rich in its possessions. We bury more treasures in the ground than we dig out of it, though the statistics will not bear us out in the assertion. Out of the earth we dig lumps of gold, in the search we bury hearts of gold, and there is a little account kept of it. It is only when we revisit the old places that we discover what havoc time and death have made.

The fair was a very fine thing, no doubt; but it was a fine thing to sit on the street corners, as in a dream, and to see Mr. Billy Carter and Mr. Roser Adams coming along the street humming a tune—to hear Demotteri, fat and genial, yell out to Julius Winfield, "Hello, Judex," and to laugh at the comments of Major Jimmy Wright. "They are going to have a game tonight," Demotteri told him to bring two decks! "It is more substantial than a dream, and yet more baseless, for all have passed away—the dream and the people." J. C. H.

After Amelie Rives.

In the swirling swirl of the southern wind as the gust goes gliding by, I sit by the side of a beautiful birch, with a moon and a smile; the melody of the old song is low, and the fog in the dark marsh chips chirping and in the ghoulhouse gloom, in a swiveling voice and harsh: "O, where is the swing of the swiftness? And the voice of the faint team four? Methinks it moans from the murky mould, From the home of the hooded owl."

Now, sweet me, from the striding spring, I'm weary of wind and wind; the gruesome grail of the jester's crown, comes jangling to my mind; the feeble song of the spotted frog, comes solemnly, rising, softening slow, and again I hear by the beautiful birch, the wall of his wimpled woe:

"O, where is the swing of the swiftness? And the voice of the faint team four? Methinks it moans from the murky mould, From the home of the hooded owl."

I dream, I dream of Amelie Rives, in the dim of the darkness dark, and methought I rode on a moonlit main, in the glow of a painful tear; I wrought a rhyme as I rode alone, in the dream of the starlight glint; I awoke at dawn in the dimpled day, and above the rhyme I wrote.

W. G. Cooper.

TAKE YOUR CHOICE.

MR. CATLEY SAYS HIS WIFE DESERVED HIM.

Mrs. Catley Denies That Statement, But Says They Have Separated and Her Husband is to Blame.

"I want you to put something in THE CONSTITUTION for me. He was a young man and was considerably agitated. In reply to a question as to the nature of his complaint, he said the reporter to believe that something had gone wrong—the young man concluded."

"My wife has left me and joined the Gospel Army. I saw her tonight at the artesian well with a cross on her dress, and I think she has gone to the hall on Forsyth street, where they hold their meetings."

"What is your name?" asked the reporter.

"Richard Catley. I drive a delivery wagon for Frank E. Block, and live at No. 61 Garrett street."

"Do you object to your wife joining the Gospel Army?"

"Yes, I do. I told her last night that if she joined that crowd I would never live with her again. I always took good care of my wife and gave her no reason for going against my wishes, but she has joined the Gospel Army and that settles it with me."

"Did she join the army of her own free will, or was she urged by anyone to do so?"

"I think her mother, Mrs. Matthews, who lived with us, induced her to leave me and join the army. Then I suppose the singing and parading, and all that sort of thing had its effect on my wife, and she left me and joined."

"Are you going to apply for a divorce?"

"Yes, I am. I shall never live with her again, and I will just put out of her power to trouble me in any way. She has seen fit to join the army after I had told her I would quit her if she did so, and I propose to stand by what I said. I am thinking of the most extensive, and she does me if I find it out."

And with a few uncomplimentary remarks about the Gospel army, Mr. Catley took his departure.

What Mrs. Catley says.

The reporter to whom Mr. Catley had confided the story of Mrs. Catley's conduct, visited the Forsyth street barracks of the Gospel Army. There was not a large attendance at last night's meeting and the reporter had not long to wait before the last hallooing song and parting benediction closed the exercises.

Taking his stand near the door through which the members of the Gospel army passed, the reporter observed a rather good looking woman in company with another, more aged. That was Mrs. Catley and her mother.

"Yes, sir, my name is Mrs. Catley," the younger said in reply to a question.

"Have you left your husband, Mrs. Catley?"

This question produced the desired effect, and Mrs. Catley nearly dropped a chew of snuff as she said in reply to this question.

"No, indeed, I did not," said Mrs. Catley as she said in reply to this question.

"Well, I am a reporter for THE CONSTITUTION, and Mr. Catley says that he had forbidden your joining the Gospel Army; that he had done so, and he was not going to live with you any more."

This was evidently another funny story to Mrs. Catley, and produced another smile, with fortuitously no disastrous results.

"I didn't leave him at all," said Mrs. Catley, and her aged mother who was talking some interest in the matter added her testimony to the effect that "Catley couldn't tell the truth."

"I'll tell you all about it," Mrs. Catley said, "and I am glad you came to see me before printing anything about this matter. Instead of me leaving my husband he has left me, but as this is the fifth time he has done that I am used to it, though this is the last time I will ever give him the chance to quit me."

Mrs. Matthews emphasized her daughter's ultimatum by sticking her finger in the reporter's side and vigor only nodding her head.

"Was your husband kind to you, Mrs. Catley?"

"Since our child died, only a few weeks ago, he has been very unkind to me, but I have stood that."

as well as forgiving him and taking him back every time he has left me previous to this."

"Did he object to your joining the Gospel Army?"

"No, he did not. He told me that I could join either the Salvation Army or the Gospel Army, but yesterday when I told him I was going to join the Gospel Army, he got mad and took all of his clothes out of the house."

"Where are you living?"

"I live at No. 61 Garrett street."

"Why, Mr. Catley, says that you were living at No. 61 Garrett street?"

"Oh, you can believe a thing he tells you," said the woman, and once more her mother made her presence known by a similar statement, as well as a deprecating shake of her head, which was almost hidden by a lace sunbonnet.

"So you did not leave Mr. Catley, and you are not living at 61 Garrett street?"

"Oh, sir, it is just as I have told you, and I am perfectly willing for the truth to be known."

And joining a party of Gospel Army members who were going over to attend the closing exercises of the Salvation Army meeting, Mrs. Catley left the scribe, wondering which to believe.

SOME POLITICAL GOSSIP.

Messrs. A. H. Murphy, of Barnesville, and Walter B. Hill, of Macon, will get out a campaign paper in this district, will make his opening speech in the campaign at DeFries's opera house next Tuesday night. He will discuss the tariff.

George S. Thomas, the republican nominee for congress in this district, will make his opening speech in the campaign at DeFries's opera house next Tuesday night. He will discuss the tariff.

A young Atlanta man said at the Kimball house last night, "I have never seen Sam Harrison win. I am willing to wager one to three that he will carry New York by twenty thousand majority and Indiana by ten thousand majority."

Smith Easley said yesterday: "The outlook now is that the republicans will put out a straight ticket sometime next week." It is understood that the efforts of the republicans to get representation on other tickets have proved unavailing. They said: "Representation or straight ticket!"

Several of the correspondents for out of town papers are insisting that the third party prohibitionists will put out a ticket against the conservatives.

These correspondents probably let their wishes control their judgment. The third party men will not put out a ticket. They are satisfied with the conservative ticket headed by Mr. Glenn. Among the most prominent supporters of Mr. Sam Small, Mr. A. S. Talley is strong for the conservative ticket and for Mr. Glenn. Mr. Chesire is earnest for Mr. Glenn and the conservative ticket. Mr. Duloch is earnest for the ticket, and for Mr. Glenn, Mr. Z. A. Rice is at work for the conservative ticket all through. This list might be extended into hundreds of the very strongest prohibitionists, many of them third party men who are willing to drop prohibition, politics, and everything else for the present, and unite in the election of the conservative ticket.

The situation now appears to be this. If Atlanta is forced into a bitter contest for now until December, it will be the anti-prohibitionists who force it, and they will force it over the protests of such strong anti as Mr. R. D. Spaulding, Mr. Jack J. Spaulding, Colonel E. P. Howell, Major John H. Fitter, Messrs. J. J. Lowry, T. G. Healy, H. Castleman, Carl Weinmeister, Hirsch, Cohen, Potts, Joe. Thompson, L. L. Mims, Wm. Traynham, and hundreds of others.

The general impression is that the anti will not pick out a full ticket, but will join the movement to give Atlanta peace and harmony for the next two years.

A NEWSPAPER BENEFIT.

To be Given for the Families of Editors Martin and Bowden.

An entertainment, the details of which have not been perfected, will be given by the newspaper men of Atlanta in a few days, for the benefit of the families of Martin and Bowden, the Jacksonville newspaper men who lost their lives in the great plague.

It is felt that those men died as heroes at the post of duty, and newspapermen all over the union are working for the benefit of the families thus bereaved.

The entertainment will be unique, and will certainly be the hit of the season.

A HOME INDUSTRY

IN WHICH MANY OF ATLANTA'S PEOPLE ARE INTERESTED.

The Growth and Magnitude of the Atlanta Brewery—The Men Employed—A Trip Through the Building.

Beer—lager beer—is a favorite beverage the world over.

Even "rice" beer, which in prohibition epochs has formed a staple article of commerce and a quencher of thirst, established a reputation that it could never have secured had it not been for the "beer" part of its name. But there is a great difference between "lager" and "rice," no matter who makes it.

There is a great deal of lager drank in Atlanta. The various well-known brewers, who have made fame and fortune by the reputation of their product, are represented here. But notwithstanding this fact, the product of the Atlanta City brewing company is steadily gaining favor with everybody who knows a good glass of beer when they drink it.

This is not only adding to the reputation and sale of the beer made by the Atlanta City Brewing company, but it is returning to the gentlemen who have invested nearly $200,000 in the plant of this institution, gratifying dividends on their capital.

The Atlanta Brewery. The Atlanta brewery was started in a small way in 1855, but its capacity was limited and for several years it was a "small affair," as the amount of business done. In 1873, Mr. Jos. Fleischer, who is now the president of the company, became interested in the business, a stockholder, and in the year 1875 a charter was secured and a strong organization was effected.

From that date the success of the Atlanta City Brewing company has been steadily increasing. The capacity, storage and proper handling has been steadily increased until it today the Atlanta City Brewing company is able to make eighty barrels of pure and wholesome beer as is manufactured here. The present storage capacity of the brewery is 5,000 barrels.

Admitting the fact that beer is a favorite beverage and that the consumption of it in Atlanta represents an outlay of money, it must be conceded that the house product should be used and sold, provided it is of as good quality as that of foreign breweries.

The argument in favor of the support and patronage of this home institution is too plain to require more than general mention. The money which would go out of town representing the cost of foreign brewed beer did not the Atlanta brewery exist, would amount to many thousands of dollars. As it is now the Atlanta brewery is first-class, and the large sale of its beer, receives and circulates here at home a large proportion of the money which would otherwise be sent out of the city and out of the state.

As to the quality of the beer which is made by the Atlanta City Brewery, it is one of the very best testimonials that can be given in call attention to its large and increasing sale in Atlanta, and its bottled brands of beer are shipped all over the south. The beer is gaining in favor every day, and every first-class bar in the city has it on draught, while the eighty licensed retailers of liquor in Atlanta sixty-five of them sell the Atlanta city beer.

Then there is the testimony of the connoisseurs, the men who hold a glass of beer up to the light, slowly sip it and tell you its merit, or what it lacks. They agree that the beer made at the Atlanta brewery is first-class, of fine color and flavor, with proper body and aged just right to make a palatable drink. They will tell you, too, that it is pure, wholesome and unadulterated. This is the testimony of Dr. Binder, whose reputation as a chemist and knowledge of beer and its proper manufacture makes his opinion valuable.

But above all the private opinions that have been offered in compliment of the Atlanta beer, the business men, its demand and sale forms the very best means of judging of its merit. And the men who have brought this product of home industry to a state of perfection where it successfully competes with the finest foreign products are entitled to a full measure of credit.

The present organization of the Atlanta City Brewing company is as follows: the gentlemen all being well known as enterprising and respectable business men. President, J. S. Fleischer; general manager, A. Steiner; secretary and treasurer, Charles Beermann. To the present management of the Atlanta City Brewery is indebted for much of its success, while in their selection of a brewer in the person of Theodor Fleischer, they have secured a high standard of excellence for the product of their brewery. Mr. A. Kuhn fills the position of general superintendent, looking carefully after the interests of his employees.

Something About the Brewery. Having in a general way referred to the fine quality and increasing sale of Atlanta beer, a brief description of the brewery is necessary and proper. In company with President Fleischer, and at his invitation, a Correspondent reporter drove out to the brewery a few days ago and made a tour of inspection through every department—not even neglecting the sampling room, where an elegant lunch and a refreshing glass of Atlanta lager formed a starting point.

The brewery buildings are situated at the corner of Courtland avenue and Harris street, the bottling department, a frame building, being a ground space of 120x30 feet, to the right of the main entrance, on Courtland avenue. Here, with the use of the latest improved machinery, a special brew is bottled for shipment and the family trade. The bottling department is a paying branch of the business and the demand for these goods is increasing every day.

The main building—the brewery proper—is a handsome three-story building, 140x200 feet in size. Starting on the ground floor, in company with Mr. Fleischer, the reporter found the rooms. This floor contains the wash room, where the hops are thoroughly cleaned by powerful streams of water, the boiler rooms, force pumps and engine. Here a force of workmen are busily engaged in putting in two new boilers of increased capacity, which will occupy a building specially constructed for the purpose, which forms a side-story annex to the main structure. The space formerly occupied by the single boiler, which has become too small for the demands of the business, will be occupied by the generator which will supply cold air to the network of pipes now being put in place in the storage vaults of the brewery. This improved style of cooling apparatus, which is being put in operation at a cost of nearly $20,000, will receive more extended mention in the description of the storage vaults.

On the second floor the immense copper kettle, with a capacity of eighty-five barrels, in which the beer is boiled, the huge mash tub and vat of the hot and cold water used in the process of manufacture are located. The storerooms, with the boxes of hops and sacks of malt, which form the base of good beer, are piled in dry, clean rooms. The hops are brought from California, while the malt sacks are brought from the "Kaiser Brewery," whose headquarters are at Louisville.

And then up to the topmost floor, where a huge copper pan holding fifty or sixty barrels of beer, is slowly feeding the product of the day's work into the pipe which carries it to the cooling tower, a frame building located about thirty feet from the brewery. Here a set of copper pipes through which ice water is constantly running, cools the beer which trickles slowly over them, coming from the copper pan thirty feet above on the top floor of the main building. Cooling to a temperature of forty degrees, the beer is caught in a vat at the bottom of the pipes, and from there through a connecting pipe it runs to a vat in the cellar, where tons and tons of ice make a summer resort that no flies will patronize, and where the reporter shivered in a suit of clothes that are more becoming when the thermometer is 90 in the shade.

A Cold Day in October. The cellars were inspected, though but for the fact that the reporter had a guide whom he never lost sight of, these lines might never have been written in time for this issue, for there is plenty of opportunity for a stranger to get lost in the storage vaults at the brewery. Mr. Fleischer gave the reporter a candle and looked playfully at his summer clothes. Mr. Gormley, who is putting in the cold air system at the brewery, joined the party and the tour of the cellars was begun.

The first point of interest underground at the brewery is the new cellar which has just been completed. Overhead the system of cold air refrigerating pipes has been placed in position and the new cellar will be ready for the storage of beer as soon as the generator is placed in position. From the new cellar, through a door that seemed a part of the brick wall into which it was hung, the party passed to a region of arctic coldness. And so on, for what seemed to the reporter, miles of travel, with constant turns, between huge coils of beer covered with hose squares of ice, the cellars were explored. In the arched roofs of the solid masonry, in a temperature that made exercise necessary to warmth, workmen are cutting away brick and mortar to make a connection with the main pipes which will send the cold air through every portion of the storage vaults and keep the thousands of barrels of beer at a proper temperature.

"One advantage of this cold air system," said Mr. Gormley, in answer to the reporter's question as to its merit, "will be the entire absence of moisture, which results from this system of cooling by packing ice around the coils. It is an expensive system, but its adoption by all the best breweries in the country demonstrates its great advantage. When this system is in working order, which will be in about four weeks, the drivers of whiskey and the stable men will be one of the best equipped in the country." And following the guiding light of Mr. Fleischer, with chattering teeth and thoroughly satisfied that Atlanta beer is kept on ice, the reporter left the cellar, followed by Mr. Gormley, who also remarked that it was rather chilly.

Everybody is interested. The magnitude of this industry and the effort it has upon the city at large is not generally recognized.

At the brewery and in the ice factory there are employed in the process of manufacture nearly a hundred men. The reporter saw the least calculation find hundred people who derive their support directly from the brewery. In addition to this the company runs twelve wagons, the drivers of which are the stable men should be added to the number of employees.

But this is not all. Everything which the brewery uses—horses, wagons, feed for horses, harness and so forth; coal to the extent of forty tons a month, wood—in short everything except the malt and hops, is purchased right here at home. The employees are paid what are considered big wages, and all this money is kept right in Atlanta.

This is a point which interests everybody. The existence of the brewery keeps here a great deal of money which otherwise goes outside of the city and of the state.

With the testimonials of experts and his own observation and experience as a guide, the Correspondent reporter, whose brief inspection of the Atlanta City brewery has been given above, adds the injunction to lovers of beer—patronize home industry and call for the Atlanta City beer.

Here is what 10 cents will buy: A good tooth brush, a nickel tape measure, 1/2 dozen darned cotton, 1 dozen I. E. hairpins, a nice purse, a good suspender, 2 dozen nickel safety pins, 3 cakes nice toilet soap.

There is a very little fight being made in Arkansas against representative C. R. Breckinridge's return to congress. Mr. Breckinridge will be remembered as the man with whom Mr. Blount had a rough and tumble fight in a democratic caucus in the morning of this session. He is a member of the ways and means committee and the son of the late John C. Breckinridge, of Kentucky. But his prospects of being returned to the fifty-first congress at present looks rather gloomy. In Arkansas, besides the two regular parties there is a union labor party which carries a very large vote. In the recent state elections the district gave the union labor candidate for governor twenty-seven hundred majority over the regular democratic nominee. This party now has a candidate out opposing him, and the republicans also have a man in the field. The republicans will vote solidly for their man, and it is feared the union labor party will make such a draw upon the democratic vote that Mr. Breckinridge will sustain defeat.

The matter became so evident to the democratic leaders in the state that they have written here for him to return home at once and enter the canvass.

Mr. Breckinridge, however, is not a man who ever had engagements ahead in New York under the national committee, which he is compelled to fill, and cannot get to Arkansas before the 25th. Realizing the embarrassing position of Mr. Breckinridge, Senator Berry, of Arkansas, has gone home to write a letter to the district which would enable him to get Senator Berry thinks it is going to be a tight race but hopes to carry it for Mr. Breckinridge.

Mr. Breckinridge is now the leading orator on the canal boat, Thomas Jefferson, which is traversing the Erie canal from Buffalo to Albany, and is one of the best of the candidates. Mr. Breckinridge and others speak during the day and at night a huge stereoscopic illuminates the darkness with tariff maxims. The portion of the canal traversed by the Thomas Jefferson is largely republican but as the canal men are mostly democrats, such as Henry Ward Beecher, that are enormously enhanced in price by reason of the tariff, those special subjects will be set before them. The Thomas Jefferson will come through the canal to Albany, and then be towed to New York. The entire expenses of the trip, which will not be far from $10,000, are being borne by ex-Mayor John B. Thayer, of Albany.

Major William H. Martin, the representative from the second district of Texas, of whom so many queer stories have been printed this session, is a typical Texas ranchman. He was very green when he first reached Washington, and the many stories which were founded on facts. He has, however, in a degree recovered from his verdancy and has learned the art of not talking too much.

I had a talk with him yesterday about his home in Texas. He lives near the little town of Athens and owns one of the very choicest ranches in the entire state, comprising some two or three thousand acres of the best grazing lands. He owns about 3,000 head of cattle, a large herd of horses, and his wealth is above the hundred thousand figures.

Major Martin came in Twigg county, Georgia, but moved to Texas when a more lad. He commanded a company of Texans in the Virginia campaign under Lee, and was said to be one of the bravest men in the war. He has been unanimously renominated and will be returned to the fifty-first congress. He declares his intention of making another tariff speech as soon as an opportunity presents itself.

Senator Isham G. Harris, of Tennessee, has been a member of the senate for twelve years and is one of the best posted men on the democratic side as to the rules of that body. His time expires on the 4th of next March, and he is again a candidate for re-election by Colonel J. D. C. Adkins, who resigned the commission of Indian affairs to go home and make the race for the senate. Mr. Adkins has now been in the field about two months, while Mr. Harris has been here on the senate finance committee attending the hearings on the tariff. Senator Harris is a popular man in the state, and is an able man. His friends claim that he will succeed Senator Harris, but on the other hand the latter's friends claim he will be his own successor. Senator Harris is a valuable man on the democratic side of the senate, and the party cannot well afford to lose his services on the floor of that body.

GOVERNOR GRAY'S RETIRING. Governor Gray of Indiana has written a letter here, in which he says that the canvass for the house state indicates a large democratic gain over that of 1887, and that the Cleveland's majority will be considerably greater than four years ago. He also says that Indiana will send eight democrats to congress—a gain of two members.

The Missouri members say they will win the election, and will send a solid democratic delegation to the fifty-first congress.

The democrats also expect to gain one man in Maryland, two in Illinois and one in Michigan.

On the other hand, Secretary McPherson, of the republican congressional committee, has

IS ALCOHOL INTOXICATING!

The Question for the Supreme Court to decide. Selling Alcohol to a Minor. An interesting case comes up for argument in the supreme court Monday morning.

It is the case of O. H. Snider against the state, carried up from the city court of Atlanta.

Some months ago Mr. Snider was charged with violating the statute making it a penal offense to sell spirituous or intoxicating liquor to minors. The case came up in the city court, and the proof was that Snider sold alcohol to a minor. Judge Van Epps charged the jury that alcohol came within the meaning of the term spirituous or intoxicating liquor.

The defendant claims that this was a question of fact which Judge Van Epps had no right to charge the jury, and the case was carried up to the supreme court, where it is to be decided whether selling alcohol to a minor is a violation of the statute making it unlawful to sell spirituous or intoxicating liquor to minors. The plaintiff is represented by Alexander & Turnbull, and the state by Solicitor F. M. O'Bryan.

Mr. Turnbull and Mr. O'Bryan spent yesterday in the state library looking up authorities on the case, and they found them divided on the question.

FINE SHOES.

Mr. John M. Moore has a Choice Lot for the Public. Yes, it was a few days ago.

In the early fall, it was, that Mr. John M. Moore began the shoe business on Peachtree. He spent considerable money in arranging the preliminaries, fixing up his store and putting things in shape. In short, he has arranged to accommodate the people of Atlanta and to sell them at reasonable prices the best shoes the market affords.

Everybody in this city knows Mr. Moore. He has been reared in the shoe business and knows how to wait on the people. The experience he has is worth much to those who wish to buy goods in this line. The public may be assured that Mr. Moore will treat everybody right and will sell them good honest goods.

The stock he now has on hand is very choice and every one can be suited. When you go down town this week don't fail to call on him, for if nothing else but to see his store. It is, indeed, a palace, and one of the prettiest in the south. Mr. Moore has spared no expense in making it so. When you want shoes why not go to the best and most popular place to get them. You not only get good goods cheap, but have a very large and artistic stock to select from.

Ten Days in New York. Many and many a time is the question asked—what does the merchant go to New York for and are such trips necessary so often? Few people can understand the dire necessity and appreciate the universal benefit bestowed on the fashionable world by frequent visits to eastern markets to supply the demands of society and to bring to our city the correct and latest fashionable modes of dress is a duty developing upon our enterprising merchant, and to perform his duty he must see the latest things just when they are brought out and put on sale at the ports of entry. New York is the only recognized repository of the European fashions, and to be up with the times the merchant must there a good deal of his time. There is no merchant in the southern country who attends the New York market any often than our own popularly known merchant, J. M. High. This is one of the secrets of his wonderful success, and it is a wide-spread fact that the
